

Sporting Events & Marathons

Sporting events and marathons have their own set of challenges when it comes to communications. Unlike many other types of events, sports require many divergent departments keep in constant contact. With most large events you will need departments ranging from production to security, from medical to management and everything in between, able to reach each other instantly. Add to that the concerns of federal departments such as Homeland Security and your communications plan is of paramount importance.

Solutions

Two-way radios offer effective, easy and powerful communications in an instant and work perfectly in these venues. The biggest problem, of course, is cost. Your communications needs are only temporary so spending thousands of dollars for your equipment so it can be put in storage immediately after the event is over is wasteful. Renting two way radios or direct connect, push to talk mobile phones is the solution. Unfortunately, laying out a communications grid so it is most effective requires experience that is hard to find.

The staff at EventTone has been working in this space for years and has lent their expertise to some of the largest sporting events and one-day marathon and race competitions in the world. We have the knowledge and equipment necessary to make sure everyone communicates and everything is flawless.
